Dear Harold,

Thanks for the documents you sent on 8/22, your letter of the 26th, and your comments on the chapters I sent you. Even though it now looks quite unlikely that this part of the book will be published, in anything like this form, in an edition of more than 50, Peter and I went through your comments carefully and discussed them. We made several changes in the text - relatively minor points, to be sure, but not trivial ones. On some of the larger issues, we definitely do disagree. I personally am not prepared to accuse Blakey of basic dishonesty. It could be my well-known Polyanna attitude; another factor could be that I simply didn't follow the King case closely enough. Anyhow, all of us appreciate the time you took to read those galleys and pass on your comments.

Here are the clippings you requested (4 pp.), and the latest newsletter.

I hope your recent medical treatment went well.

With best regards,

Paul
